

Paulett pride

BOASTING arguably one of the best views in the Clare Valley, matched by award-winning wine and bush-inspired food, Paulett Wines and Bush DeVine Café has forged itself as one of the region's go-to locations for both tourists and locals alike.

Stepping through the doors of Pauletts is truly like being welcomed into their family.

It is something the Pauletts pride themselves on, and is a clear reflection on founders Neil and Alison, and now son Matt and daughter-in-law Ali Paulett's approach to their 30 staff members, and customers.

"One of our great strengths is having a consistent team, with many of our staff with us since we opened and we are ridiculously proud of them – they are absolutely amazing and without them we'd have nothing," Ali said.

"Their skill, hard work and passion really does flow on to our guests. It's so humbling walking in to see their smiling faces and be welcomed like part of our family, and I really think our visitors feel that too."

It is no secret 2020 has thrown a lot at the Clare Valley wine industry – drought, low yields, COVID-19 cellar door closures, and a massive downturn in exports, however one shining light has been the exceptional quality of its current release wines.

Under the expertise of winemaker Jarrad Steele, the 2020 Paulett wines are no exception.

In fact, a visit to the Paulett cellar door and restaurant will see every current vintage wine offered scoring an impressive Halliday rating of 90 points or above.

"The 2020 vintage was a cracker – low yielding but of exceptional quality," Ali said.

"That in itself is a little heartbreaking – knowing we had exceptional quality, but low yields and our international and interstate markets coming to a standstill meaning we bottled less of it. "Fortunately for us, we have seven active exporters who have continued through COVID, also the South Australian market is booming, and we're starting to see some of our interstate markets very slowly starting to come back."
